Avilar Hosts Training Provider Month

COLUMBIA, MD – June 12, 2006 - Avilar, Inc., a leader in eLearning and Competency Management, is hosting several training-provider events and presenting new collateral in the month of June. Additions include a webinar, survey, case studies, and a new section of the Avilar website.

“Avilar has clients from many sectors but one of the types of clients we seem to impact the most is training companies,” says CEO John Skowlund. “Our training company clients tell us often that they have grown their businesses dramatically due to the reliability and vigor of our Learning Management System, WebMentor LMS, and Avilar’s willingness to cater our products to clients’ unique needs.”

The webinar, scheduled for June 29th, will use Avilar customer best practices to give training providers an idea of what is necessary when starting an online training company. Joe Jaynes, Avilar’s Director of Customer Operations, will host the webinar.

“Because Avilar doesn’t force clients into an off-the-shelf product, we have great relationships with our clients,” says Jaynes. “I know all of their stories and have seen many times over what it takes to be successful when moving a training business online. This webinar will show training providers the success stories and actual do’s and don’ts of web-based training, not the theories.”

In the same success-story mode as the webinar, Avilar will be posting best practices of training provider clients such as careLearning. Charleston, West Virginia-based careLearning began in 1999 with the goal of improving the way healthcare workers maintained their certifications and extended their healthcare knowledge. Last month the non-profit organization reached one million course registrations.

In addition to the webinar and case studies, Avilar is sponsoring a survey to better uncover training provider business needs, challenges and suggestions for the clients they serve.
